

Oregonauthor.com
Text and photos by C.
Remmerde
Sonoran Journal 7-2-2018
Vultures Around My Place

These guys are all around the house in the mornings. It is good roosting for eastern exposure, first thing. They fly in just after dawn. The one with wings spread is doing a "horaltic pose," though it had relaxed a bit before I could take a photo.

(Editorial notes researched from the internet) "Vultures are often seen standing in a spread-winged stance - called the 'horaltic pose.' The horaltic pose is believed to serve multiple functions: drying the wings, warming the body, and baking off bacteria."

