

Oregonauthor.com
C. Remmerde
from The Sonoran Journal
August 2, 2019

Good Morning Toooo Whooo

It has been so hot, I haven't even gotten out in the mornings to wander the desert. But after a night's cooling rain storm, I roamed around the following morning and here is the yield. The Great Horned Owl was compliant about a portrait.

The vultures have been productive this year. There are several very young ones, you can tell by the black heads. They are more active than the adults, and they play.

I watched one for 15 minutes as it walked the tightrope of the old power line that is no longer in use. It seemed to be having a good time learning to balance on the swaying wire.

